

SUTURE MATERIAL FOR SURGERY. PROCESSES FOR ITS PRODUCTION AND THE USE THEREOF

ABSTRACT

A suture material for surgery comprises one or more filaments and is formed with a coating, which is characterized in that the coating at least partly comprises a bioresorbable polymer, which is essentially formed from a random terpolymer with a completely amorphous structure.